The Good Samaritan

Redeem the time...

Be wise with your days—less distraction, more devotion (Ephesians 5:15–16). Consider a weekly fast from media to make space for prayer and reflection.

Our aim is not spiritual busyness but spiritual formation. We want to be transformed by the renewing of our minds (Romans 12:1–2), to grow in Christlike character—compassion, kindness, humility, patience, and love (Colossians 3:12–14).

Let's also lean into our life together as a congregation. The early church "devoted themselves to the apostles' teaching and the fellowship, to the breaking of bread and the prayers" (Acts 2:42). That same devotion will bless us in the year ahead: opening our Bibles, opening our homes, and opening our hearts. If you're new among us, we're thankful you're here. If you've been here for years, thank you for your steady faith. Each member is needed, valued, and gifted by God (1 Corinthians 12).

As we make plans, we do so humbly: "If the Lord wills, we will live and do this or that" (James 4:15). We don't know what this year will hold, but we know who holds us. Whether in joy or trial, Jesus is enough. His grace is sufficient, His promises are sure, and His church is a family where we bear one another's burdens and rejoice in one another's blessings.

Shifting away from the mission of the seventy, a lawyer tests Jesus. His reply is asking how the fellow reads and understands the commands. The two greatest commands are cited. Then, in a test of the second greatest, we receive the parable of the Good Samaritan. The audience might have thought that the priest or Levite would have come to his aid, but since they had to maintain ritual purity, they passed on the other side. They made a choice not in keeping with the two great commands. They loved God but failed to love their neighbor. The Samaritan is kind to him, which was taboo, given the animosity between Jews and Samaritans and their recent history. When Jesus asks the lawyer which of the three was a neighbor, the lawyer doesn't bring himself to say Samaritan, but he who showed mercy.

I've spoken at length on the tension between the Jews and Samaritans in Jesus' time. Nevertheless, the tension between Jews and Samaritans has its origin going back as far as the split between the northern and southern kingdoms of Israel. However, in Jesus' time, the tensions escalated because the Samaritans allied themselves with the Seleucids against the Jews in the Maccabean wars and in 108 BC. Subsequently, the Jews destroyed the Samaritan temple and ravaged the surrounding areas. Near the time of Jesus' birth, Samaritans desecrated the Temple by scattering bones of dead people in the sanctuary. This all accounts for the animosity between them by the time of the New Testament events.

At one point, Jesus was accused of being a Samaritan as an effort to denigrate him (John 8:28). Christ's disposition towards them was always one of blessing: "good Samaritan" (Luke 10:30–37); one grateful Samaritan of the ten who returned to give Christ thanks (Luke 17:12–19); Samaritan woman at the well (John 4:7–26). On one occasion, a Samaritan village rejected Jesus, and James and John wanted to use power to punish them. Still, Jesus would not resort to violence, coercion, or revenge to accomplish God's purposes (Luke 9:51–56). Behind the Good Samaritan is Jesus trying to heal the rift between the two races who shared similar blood. In Acts, the gospel reaches them as the result of persecution. The division that was created is torn asunder by the blood of Jesus. Such divisions that occur today ought to be brought down by the same.

After Brother Hill

Brother James R. Hill's relatively short but highly significant life ended in 1904, the little band which he had largely organized disbanded with members scattering to various county congregations.

After a few years, a second attempt was made to establish a congregation in Murray. This effort was successful and ultimately led to the University & Glendale Road churches of which we are a part today.

In 1909, several county churches, especially Green Plain, Hazel and Union Grove, funded an effort to invite the celebrated evangelist, James A. Harding, of Bowling Green to conduct a tent meeting on the courthouse lawn.

This effort resulted in 13 members banding together to form the nucleus of a permanent group that would eventually be known as the Water Street Church of Christ. Having no building and very little money, this group met for a time in various public buildings such as the courthouse, Woodruff Theater and other locations. [The Woodruff Theater was a large building that sat immediately south of the Christian Church and which served for many years later as the Shroat Meat Market]
