Hospitality, Prayer, and Exorcism (Luke 10:38–11:32)

Involve

Garry Evans

In many classes I have been amazed at the number of times that individuals have expressed the one trait that they wished they could build would be more patience. It seems that most of us struggle with this fruit of the spirit.

Patience

Patience is not passive. In Scripture it is active endurance rooted in trust in God.

Why patience matters...

- It reflects God's character. God is patient with sinners (2 Peter 3:9; Romans 2:4).

- It is a fruit of the Spirit, not a personality trait we manufacture (Galatians 5:22–23).

- It sustains love. Love is patient (1 Corinthians 13:4).

- It strengthens hope. Endurance produces character and hope (Romans 5:3–5).

Patience with people: Relationships test our patience. The church is a family of people at different stages of growth. We are told to be “quick to hear, slow to speak, slow to anger” (James 1:19), to bear with one another in love (Ephesians 4:2), and to restore the wavering gently (Galatians 6:1). This does not excuse sin; it frames our response—truth spoken with grace, correction offered with humility, and an aim to win a brother or sister rather than to win an argument (Romans 14; 15:1–2).

The next scene after the Good Samaritan is astonishing. While Martha is encumbered by hospitality, Mary assumes the role of a disciple—something also taboo. Jewish rabbis did not have female disciples. Ever! Yet, the language of her sitting at his feet is just that (cf. Acts 22:3; cf. Deut. 33:3).

While Matthew gives the Lord's Prayer in the context of the Sermon on the Mount, Luke places it in the context of answering a question posed by the disciples. These differences are often seen as contradictions, but each author writes within a literary style and a theme they intend to convey in the gospel. Also, they have a target audience in mind. What follows are stories of prayer: the persistent friend who continues knocking (11:5–10) and the good father who gives to those who ask (11:11–13).

Jesus casts out the demon of a mute man, who afterward spoke. His opposition attributes his miracle to Satan. Then, once more, they ask for a sign. Beelzebub, sometimes spelled Beelzebul, is the name of the pagan god Baal. The Hebrew term zebul means “excrement.” This name attributed to Satan is impolite and mocking. Other names for Satan were Belial, Mastemah, Sammael, and Asmodeus. Given the rude nature of this name, the users mean to insult Jesus in the worst way. He replies by showing how weak their argument is. Then, he points out that an exorcised demon wanders until it finds a new place to reside. Sometimes it goes back to the original host, taking more with it, thus putting that person in a worse state than before (11:24–26). Jesus is likely saying this as a repudiation of Jewish exorcists, who were credible to those critiquing him.

A woman lifts her voice in praise of Mary's womb, but Jesus redirects her attention. Had Maryology been something the Lord wanted, he could have given instructions here. Yet, he does not. The adoration of Mary arose in the mid-second century due to the writing, the Protoevangelium of James. Though the audience wanted a sign, Jesus gave them the sign of Jonah. As Jonah converted the Ninevites, and as the Queen of the South sought the wisdom of Solomon, so will they be judged by those who saw and repented. As they know, they attribute it to darkness. Those who see the works of God are full of light (11:33–36). Concluding this chapter are woes upon the Pharisees and lawyers.

Enter James A. Harding

Re establishing an a'cappella church in Murray got off to a rocky start following the division that roughly spanned c1890 to 1909. Informed people realized that the county seat needed the presence of a strong church and funds were raised from several county churches to see that this was accomplished.

Arguably, the biggest name among Churches of Christ east of the Mississippi at this time was the celebrated James Alexander Harding, who was born in Winchester, KY in 1848 and died in Atlanta in 1922. At this point in time, Harding was living in Bowling Green and was in great demand as a speaker at all sorts of events. He became widely known as an educator, preacher, debater, professor and businessman.

His influence was especially apparent during the highly significant closing decade of the 19th century and the first decade of the 20th century. Church leaders in Calloway realized that his reputation was needed to get the Murray church going again in a dignified way and, thus, the invitation was extended to conduct a tent meeting on the courthouse lawn.
